

Workshop

Restraints of trade & protecting confidential information

Every business wants to prevent intellectual property, confidential and sensitive information from falling into the wrong hands....

The workshop will address:

- What constitutes confidential information?
- The role of effective employment contracts, policies and procedures in reducing the risk of intellectual property loss.
- Dealing with confidential information.
- Copyright & employees: who owns what?
- Protecting your business from departing employees: don't let your star employee become your biggest competitor.
- Effective restraint clauses.
- How to respond quickly to threats to your business.
- Departing directors and senior officers: Invoking protections under the Corporations Act (Cth) 2001.
- Recent developments in the case law.
- How to apply the core concepts of information security to enhance your business's IT practices and minimise the risk of intellectual property and confidential information walking out the door: presented by Tristan Hough, Managing Director of Myrtec.

Myrtec works with professional organisations to develop and implement information security policies and practices. Myrtec adopts a proactive approach to risk management and data control by helping businesses establish a solid foundation on which to apply administrative, physical and access controls. Myrtec works collaboratively with businesses to develop practical, tailored solutions that address individual security requirements.
